If you go to hospital with COVID-19 you may be asked to consent to join a research study. If you cannot give consent yourself — for example, because you are being helped to breathe by a machine — then your relatives, with the nurses and doctors, can arrange consent for you.

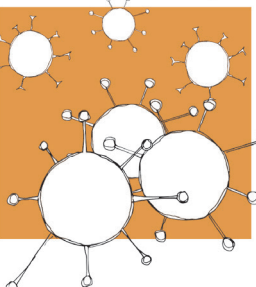

Your consent process will be easier if you and your relatives have thought about this possibility and the hospital knows this.

PLEASE carry a COVID-19 Research Volunteer CARD.

Print this sheet. Cut out the cards. Answer the questions YES or NO. Sign them. Fold it. Put them in your wallet or purse.

TrialsConnect has had the help of some other patients, research volunteers, and their friends to produce a card that you can carry. Everyone can immediately know that you are happy to be asked to join certain types of trial or not.

Carrying this card does NOT give automatic consent to joining any trial. You or a relative will always have to give 'informed consent' after having the trial details explained. It does make starting the process easier for your doctors and relatives.
